ABSTRACT

This study examined three synonymous verbs in English, namely respond, reply, and answer, concerning their grammatical patterns, collocations, and degree of formality compared and contrast between British English and American English. The data were drawn from Longman Dictionary of Contemporary English Online and two corpora, namely the British National Corpus (BNC) and the Corpus of Contemporary American English (COCA). It was discovered that these three verbs cannot be used interchangeably in every context. Regarding the shared patterns as well as the different patterns, each word has its distinguishing pattern. In terms of collocations, only the word question/questions can co-occur with all three verbs. For the degree of formality, the results showed that respond can be used in both formal and informal contexts. However, when considering the frequency of occurrence in the academic genre, respond occurred more often than answer and reply, so it can be concluded that it is the most formal word. The results also revealed no significant difference between American and British native speakers in terms of the usage of these three synonymous verbs.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This independent study could not have been accomplished without the support from several people.

First of all, I would like to express my deep gratitude to my advisor, Ajarn Rangsiya Chaengchenkit, for her valuable time as well as providing guidance and support for this study.

I would like to thank all of the instructors at the Language Institute, Thammasat University who taught me in the program, especially Assistant Professor Supakorn Phoocharoenkil, who introduced me to Corpus Linguistics.

I would also like to thank all the staff members and my MEC friends for their support throughout my time of study.

Finally, I wish to extend my thanks to my beloved family for their love, great support and encouragement.

Miss Piyachat Pimjuntug

CHAPTER 1

INTRODUCTION

1.1 BACKGROUND

In learning English, vocabulary is one of the most important things that L2 learners must pay attention to in order to avoid miscommunication in the target language. Lexical items convey the main meaning of the message, so it can lead to misunderstanding if the wrong word is used (Hemchua & Schmitt, 2006). In particular, the words that share similar meanings called synonyms are difficult to select because they share similar senses of meaning but cannot be used interchangeably. Although some words convey the same meaning, they might occur in different grammatical structures. Moreover, they might have their own fixed collocations as well as degree of formality. Therefore, L2 learners need to learn and master these differences in order to use English effectively. Learners who would like to improve their English skills thus need to master synonyms (Phoocharoensil, 2010).

This study aims to examine a set of synonyms, namely respond, reply, and answer, selected from the research of Yumanee (2011) on the collocation errors of 60 high school students in Thailand. A multiple-choice test and a translation test were distributed to the participants. The findings showed that students were unable to choose the correct collocation. One of the causes is a lack of ability to differentiate the synonyms. This is an example of a sentence for which students made the wrong choice:

“We keep dialing this number but it seems that no one responds/replies the telephone. While the correct answer is: answer the telephone.”

This is a good example of choosing the wrong synonym because students did not recognize the collocation. Accordingly, it is one of the synonymous aspects that this study aims to examine.

There have been various studies about synonyms. Almost all the results have shown that synonyms cannot be used interchangeably; these types of words are called near or loose synonyms rather than perfect or strict synonyms.

Respond, reply, and answer is a set of synonyms, but they might have differences as well. Moreover, as these words were misused by the students in the research of Yumanee (2011), this study would like to further examine the similarities and differences in terms of grammatical patterns, collocations, and degree of formality. Longman Dictionary of Contemporary English (LDOCE, 2016) was used to obtain the meaning and patterns of these verbs. Then, the British National Corpus (BNC) and the Corpus of Contemporary American English (COCA) were selected to compare the information from the dictionary as well as to investigate the differences in terms of usage between the American and British native speakers.

1.2 RESEARCH QUESTIONS

1.2.1 What are the similarities and differences among three synonymous verbs, namely respond, reply, and answer, in terms of the grammatical patterns, collocations, and the degree of formality?

1.2.2 What are the similarities and differences in using respond, reply, and answer between British English and American English?

1.3 RESEARCH OBJECTIVES

1.3.1 To find out the similarities and differences among respond, reply, and answer in terms of grammatical patterns, collocations, and the degree of formality.

1.3.2 To investigate the similarities and differences in using respond, reply, and answer between BNC and COCA.

1.4 DEFINITION OF TERMS

1.4.1 L2 learner refers to learners who study English as a second language.

1.4.2 Synonym is “a word with the same meaning as another word in the same language” (Longman Dictionary of Contemporary English: LDOCE, 2016)

1.4.3 Near or loose synonym refers to a pair or group of words that share a similar meaning but cannot be used interchangeably in all contexts.

1.4.4 Perfect or strict synonym refers to a pair or group of words that share similar meaning and can be used interchangeably in all contexts.

1.4.5 Lexical item is word or vocabulary.

1.4.6 Denotation means the main meaning of a word.

1.4.7 Connotation refers to the implied meaning of a word.

1.4.8 Register or genre refers to the style of using language in particular situations, such as formal and informal situations.

1.4.9 Syntax refers to the grammatical arrangement of words in a sentence.

1.4.10 Corpus means a collection of authentic texts stored in a computer database.

1.5 SCOPE OF THE STUDY

This study focused on the base forms of the verbs respond, reply, and answer, both as transitive and intransitive verbs, in terms of their grammatical patterns, collocations, and the degree of formality. The research was limited to only 200 concordance lines to compare and contrast between British English and American English for each verb, which were drawn from generalized corpora - the British National Corpus (BNC) and the Corpus of Contemporary American English (COCA).

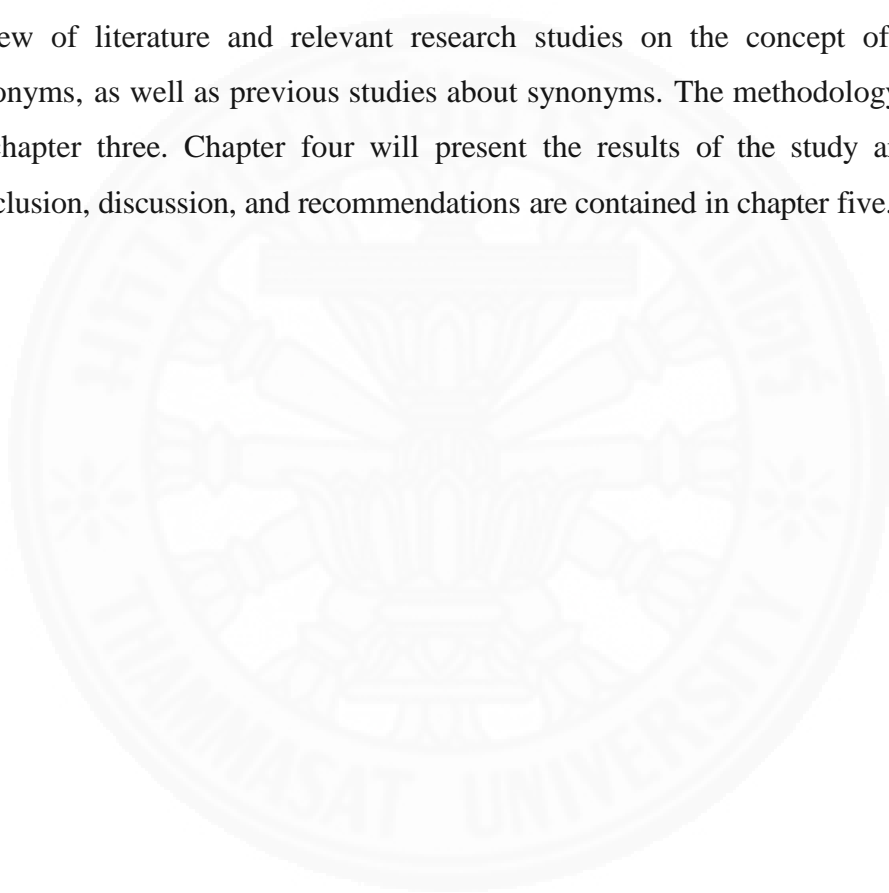

1.6 SIGNIFICANCE OF THE STUDY

In learning English, vocabulary is one of the most important factors because lexical items convey the main meaning. Without adequate vocabulary, the receiver cannot understand the meaning that the sender wants to communicate. Wilkins (1972, pp.111-112) as cited in Alfaki (2015) wrote “...while without grammar very little can be conveyed, without vocabulary nothing can be conveyed”. Lewis (1993, p.89) as cited in Alfaki (2015) wrote “Lexis is the core or heart of language”. These statements indicate the significance of lexicon in learning and communication in English. However, some words have more than one meaning and this causes problems for L2 learners in regard to choosing the correct word in each context, grammatical pattern, or collocation. Studying synonyms would help L2 learners better understand the use of words with similar meanings, especially a set of words that are used in daily life like respond, reply, and answer. However, a word can have the same meaning as another word in the language and this causes problems for L2 learners to choose the correct one.

1.7 ORGANIZATION OF THE STUDY

This study is divided into five chapters. Chapter one is the introduction. It gives the importance of synonyms and the aim of the research. Chapter two contains the review of literature and relevant research studies on the concept of corpus and synonyms, as well as previous studies about synonyms. The methodology is provided in chapter three. Chapter four will present the results of the study and lastly the conclusion, discussion, and recommendations are contained in chapter five.

CHAPTER 2

REVIEW OF LITERATURE

This chapter reviews the literature in three main areas: (1) the concept of corpus, (2) the concept of synonyms, and (3) relevant research studies

2.1 THE CONCEPT OF CORPUS

The concept of a computer-based corpus was first introduced in 1961 by W. Nelson Francis and Henry Kucera at Brown University in the United States. They are the founders of the Brown corpus, which is the first electronic collection of English texts for linguistic research purposes.

The word corpus (plural corpora) is from a Latin word which means body. Formerly, the word corpus was used to refer to the body of work by a single author such as “The Shakespeare corpus” or refer to collections of linguistic examples on slips of paper as well, but nowadays corpus usually refers to a computer-based collection of authentic texts (Lindquist, 2009, p. 3).

O’Keeffe, McCarthy, & Carter (2007:1) explain corpus as an electronic collection of naturally-occurring examples of language used in both written and spoken contexts, which is a systematic or principled collection available for qualitative and quantitative analysis. The Longman Dictionary of Contemporary English (2016) defines corpus in two ways. Previously, corpus meant a “a collection of all the writing of a particular kind or by a particular person: the entire corpus of Shakespeare’s works”. The more recent definition means “a large collection of written or spoken language, which is used for studying the language: a corpus of spoken English”.

According to Bennett (2010) there are about eight types of corpora: (1) generalized, (2) specialized, (3) learner, (4) pedagogic, (5) historical, (6) parallel, (7) comparable, and (8) monitor. Each type of corpora is suitable for a specific purpose of study. For example, the generalized corpus is appropriate for the general area of linguistic study because it is the broadest type and a large corpus that contains a variety of texts numbering more than 10 million words. The British National Corpus (BNC), the American National Corpus (ANC), and the Corpus of Contemporary American English (COCA) are examples of generalized corpora. These corpora contain the texts from newspapers, magazines, fiction, nonfiction, scholarly journals, informal conversations, government proceedings, and business meetings, which provide a whole picture of a language to users.

Nowadays, corpus plays a crucial role in linguistics, so the study of language based on the use of computerized corpora is called corpus linguistics. One of the purposes of corpus linguistics is in the area of dictionary making. The pioneer corpus-based dictionary is Cobuild Dictionary (Cobuild stands for Collins Birmingham University International Language Database). This dictionary was created in 1980 by using The Bank of English (BoE) corpus for compiling it, and most dictionaries currently claim that they are corpus-based.

This present study employed the British National Corpus (BNC) as the source of British English texts for comparison with the language used in American English that is contained in the Corpus of Contemporary American English (COCA). Text taken from corpus is called a ‘concordance line’. It can occur in a complete sentence or be a part of a sentence. Each concordance line presents the target word in bold font between its contexts. Below are the examples of five concordance lines from the BNC with the target word ‘big’.

Notice that examples four and five present complete sentences. Examples one and three display only the beginning of sentences while example two shows the middle of uncompleted sentence. These are the material that corpus users take to study.

The reason these two sources were the target instruments is because they are large and generalized corpora which store a variety of authentic examples and this study aimed to explore the features of the synonymous verbs respond, reply, and answer in daily life usage.

2.1.1 The British National Corpus (BNC)

The BNC is a large and free computer-based corpus that stores 100 million words of British English from both written and spoken texts. The BNC project is a co-operation between Oxford University, Lancaster University, The British Library, Longman Group Ltd and Chambers. It started in 1991 and took three years to compile (Leech, 1992). Nowadays, the BNC is widely used in linguistics research. For instance, Hanks, who is a pioneer of corpus-based study, also used the BNC in 1996 to investigate synonymous verbs including urge, incite, bother, and abandon.

2.1.2 The Corpus of Contemporary American English (COCA)

The COCA is the largest corpus of American English in use. It was created by Mark Davies, Professor of Corpus Linguistics at Brigham Young University. The corpus is freely accessible with 520 million words of American English compiled from 1990 to 2015. It contains varieties of texts such as, spoken, fiction, popular magazines, newspapers, and academic journals. Nowadays, it is also widely used by about tens of thousands of people each month (Wikipedia, 2016).

2.2 THE CONCEPT OF SYNONYMS

Cambridge Dictionaries Online (2016) defines a synonym as “a word or phrase that has the same or nearly the same meaning as another word or phrase in the same language: The words ‘small’ and ‘little’ are synonyms”.

Oxford Learner’s Dictionaries (2016) also provides a similar definition as “a word or expression that has the same or nearly the same meaning as another in the same language: ‘big’ and ‘large’ are synonyms”.

However, Longman Dictionary of Contemporary English Online (2016) provides a slightly different definition. It mentions only the same meaning, so synonym means “a word with the same meaning as another word in the same language: ‘shut’ is a synonym of ‘closed’”. This shows that Longman Dictionary is less concerned about strict and loose synonyms.

The term ‘synonymy’ in English has its origin from the Greek word ‘sunonumon’, which means ‘having the same name’; thus, in English, a synonym is used to show the relationship between two words that have the same meaning.

2.2.1 Strict and loose synonyms

Many linguists have divided synonyms into ‘strict or absolute’ and ‘loose’ synonyms. Two words that are considered to be strict synonyms may be used interchangeably with one another in all contexts. However, some linguists argue that the meaning of a word changes slightly in different contexts. For example, the words ‘sky’ and ‘heaven’ both have physical and spiritual meanings, but ‘sky’ normally represents the physical while ‘heaven’ denotes the spiritual. Another type of synonym is a loose synonym, which refers to words that cannot be substituted in every context without the denotation changing. For example, ‘find’ and ‘discover’ are exchangeable in the context of Lydia found/discover the ball behind the garden shed; but not in the context of Marie Curie discovered radium in 1898 (Jackson & Amvela, 2000, pp. 107-109). It is quite hard for L2 learners to distinguish synonyms because some words share a very close sense of meaning.

The criteria used to distinguish synonyms can be classified into four categories: denotational variations, including propositional and fuzzy; stylistic variations, including dialect and register; expressive variation, including emotive and attitude; structural variations, including collocation, selection, and syntax (Edmonds & Hirst, 2002).

The current study focused on structural and stylistic variations involving collocations, syntax or grammatical patterns, and register or degree of formality.

2.2.2 Criteria for distinguishing synonyms

2.2.2.1 Grammatical Patterns

Although many synonyms share similar meanings, they could have different syntactic structure. For example, the two synonymous verbs sleepy and asleep have different grammatical structure. Asleep cannot be used before noun like asleep boy while sleepy boy can be used (Meemanan, 2013).

Phoocharoensil (2010) pointed out that ask and beg shared several structures as below:

Ask/Beg + (somebody) + for + something

Ask/Beg + somebody + to-V.inf

Ask/Beg + to-V.inf

Ask/Beg + that + Subject + V.inf

However, they also form in different patterns as follows:

Ask + (somebody) + if/whether

Beg + (something) + (from + somebody)

Chalong (2014) investigated the grammatical patterns of abandon, renounce, and relinquish. The findings showed that the three verbs shared two patterns as below:

Abandon/Renounce/Relinquish + something

Abandon/Renounce/Relinquish + somebody

The words also form in different patterns as follows:

Abandon + somebody + to + something

Renounce + something + to + something

Relinquish + something + to + somebody

2.2.2.2 Collocations

Longman Dictionary of Contemporary English (2016) defines collocation as “the way in which some words are often used together, or a particular combination of words used in this way.” For example “Commit a crime’ is a typical collocation in English”.

The term “collocation” is from the Latin word “collocare” which means “to set in order/to arrange”. It was first introduced by John Rupert Firth in 1957 who was considered the father of collocation. In Firth’s view, a collocation is a combination of words that frequently co-occur (Martynska, 2004).

According to Edmonds & Hirst (2002), the combination of single words or idioms can be considered a collocation as well. For example, the words ‘task’ and ‘job’ can co-occur with different collocates. Task can be combined as ‘face a daunting task’ whereas cannot ‘face a daunting job’. Another example of a collocation is ‘rancid butter’. This is called a strong collocation because they co-occur very often and ‘rancid’ tends to go together only with ‘butter’ (Punyasuth, 2014).

Yumanee (2011) conducted research on the error analysis of English collocations among Thai EFL students using two collocational tests. The findings showed that most students had a problem with Noun + Noun collocations such as ‘weather conditions’.

Darvishi (2011) researched collocation errors in undergraduate students. He studied collocational errors in EFL college learners’ writing skill using a questionnaire approach and the BNC to analyze the information. He found that students’ mother tongue was the most influential factor leading to errors, followed by the limitation of the collocation concept, and interlingual transfer.

2.2.2.3 Degree of Formality

Style or formality is important when communicating in English as it shows the politeness of the speaker. To distinguish synonyms by considering the level of word formality is a smart way of learning English.

Punyasuth (2014) studied the synonyms adjourn and postpone in terms of formality based on the COCA corpus. She found that the two words can be used in both formal and informal contexts. It was determined that adjourn is more formal than postpone because its collocations appeared in more formal contexts such as congress, session, and legislature. Moreover, adjourn tended to occur less often in informal contexts.

Liu & Espino (2012) studied the synonymous adverbs actually, genuinely, really, and truly based on the register in COCA. They found that really was the least formal because it most often occurred in the spoken register and least often in the academic genre. The words genuinely and truly were considered as the most formal because they had lower frequency of occurrence in the spoken register and higher frequency in the academic genre.

2.3 RELEVANT RESEARCH

Chung (2011) examined the similarities and differences between two synonymous verbs, namely create and produce, using three corpora, the Brown Corpus and the Frown Corpus (from ICAME) and compared the results to the British National Corpus (BNC) through the Sketch Engine (SkE) in order to analyze the similarities and differences of two near-synonyms. The findings showed that two words have two similarities in that they both appeared as an infinitive and the –ed forms as well as shared an overlapping sense of meaning such as happen, occur, and manufacturing a man-made product. On the other hand, the differences related to their objects; produce was usually followed by factories and farming but create was usually followed by small unit.

Cai (2012) studied the differences in the meanings and uses among seven synonymous adjectives, namely awesome, excellent, fabulous, fantastic, great, terrific, and wonderful. The data were drawn from the Corpus of Contemporary American English (COCA). He found that in terms of meaning, fabulous, fantastic, terrific and awesome showed a positive meaning while great was more general. When considering connotations he found that fabulous and fantastic conveyed the sense of something incredible. In terms of usage, all seven adjectives were mainly used in the spoken genre, which is an informal context, and they have similar and different adverbs and noun collocations. Therefore, his findings support the idea that synonyms cannot be used interchangeably in every context.

Figs (2013) examined three synonyms, namely want, fancy, and wish, focusing on the similarities and differences in terms of meaning, grammatical patterns, and genre. The British National Corpus (BNC) data and Longman Language Activator Thesaurus online (2002) were used as the tool in this study. The findings showed that these three words had a similar sense in terms of meaning ‘want to have or do something’ but they had different grammatical structure as well as the degree of formality. In terms of grammatical pattern, want and wish had the same structure. It can be concluded that they both could be substituted in some contexts. In consideration of the degree of formality, wish was the most formal word, followed by want and fancy.

Punyasuth (2014) studied the similarities and differences between the two synonymous verbs adjourn and postpone in terms of grammatical pattern, collocation, and degree of formality by using the COCA as an instrument. She found that these two verbs occurred in different patterns: adjourn tended to occur in more formal situations than postpone because it collocates with highly formal words such as congress, session, and senate. It can thus be concluded that they are loose synonyms.

The results of the four studies above were similar. This supports the findings of many studies that synonyms cannot be used interchangeably in every context. Synonymous words retain their own characteristics. The most important thing that distinguishes synonyms is collocation followed by the level of word formality. Therefore, this study selected a set of synonyms from the English collocational error analysis of Thai EFL students by Yumanee 2011 for further study.

CHAPTER 3

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

This chapter describes: (1) test item (2) data collection, and (3) data analysis.

3.1 TEST ITEM

The subjects of this study were three synonymous verbs: respond, reply, and answer. They share a similar sense of meaning in some contexts so it is difficult to distinguish them.

3.2 DATA COLLECTION

Longman Dictionary of Contemporary English Online (LDOCE, 2016) together with the two generalized corpora namely the British National Corpus (BNC) and the Corpus of Contemporary American English (COCA) were selected as the research instruments in this study. The reasons behind choosing these materials were because the BNC and the COCA are the largest British and American corpora. Moreover, they are freely accessible and widely used among English learners. The LDOCE was also selected as an instrument in this study because it provides a lot of information including definitions, examples, and pronunciation.

To conduct the research, the LDOCE was used to check the definition of the verbs respond, reply, and answer as well as the grammatical patterns. Then, the two corpora were used to collect 200 concordance lines for each word in each corpus, respectively. A total of 1,200 concordance lines were examined to observe the similarities and differences in terms of grammatical patterns while collocations were analyzed by selecting top ten noun collocates from the two corpora. Finally, the degree of formality was analyzed based on their genres.

The definition and grammatical patterns of each verb were collected from the dictionary. Then, the concordance lines were drawn from the two corpora provided on the websites <http://corpus.byu.edu/bnc/> and <http://corpus.byu.edu/coca/> by selecting KWIC display. In order to limit the particular part of speech to only the verbs of interest, a period was put between the target verb and speech tag in parenthesis like answer.[v]* and then the concordance lines were observed. Next, the genres were obtained by choosing the CHART display and lastly, the collocations were drawn by selecting the LIST display with the noun collocates that followed the target verbs.

3.3 DATA ANALYSIS

After retrieving the information from the BNC and the COCA, each of the 200 concordance lines of each verb, i.e., respond, reply, and answer, were put into a spreadsheet. Then, the similarities and differences were investigated in terms of the grammatical patterns as well as the frequency of occurrence. Collocations were analyzed based on the frequency of noun collocates after the verbs and the degree of formality was determined by comparing the distribution in the genres. Finally, they were compared between British English and American English and conclusions were drawn.

RESULTS

The previous chapter explained the methodology used in the study. The data were drawn from three main sources: (1) Longman Dictionary of Contemporary English Online (LDOCE, 2016); (2) the British National Corpus (BNC); and (3) the Corpus of Contemporary American English (COCA). This chapter reports the results on the similarities and differences between British English and American English in terms of grammatical patterns, collocations, and the degree of formality of three synonymous verbs respond, reply, and answer. The findings are presented in three parts based on key word study.

4.1 RESPOND

4.1.1 Definition from LDOCE

- a. (vi.) to do something as a reaction to something that has been said or done [= react]
- b. (vi., vt.) to say or write something as a reply
- c. (vi.) to improve as a result of a particular kind of treatment

4.1.2 Patterns from LDOCE

- a. respond + to + something
e.g. She has responded well to treatment.
- b. respond + by doing something e.g. The US responded by sending troops into Laos.
- c. respond + with + something
e.g. Villagers responded with offers of help.
- d. respond + that-clause
e.g. He responded that he didn't want to see anyone.

4.1.3 Corpus Data

4.1.3.1 Patterns from BNC and COCA

The two hundred concordance lines of the bare verb respond from BNC and COCA were put into a spreadsheet and then manually analyzed in order to see whether the patterns occurring in the dictionary could be found in real use.

Table 1. RESPOND: The frequency of patterns in the dictionary and corpora

| Possible Pattern | BNC | | COCA | |
|---|------------|----------------|------------|----------------|
| | Frequency | | Frequency | |
| | lines | percentage | lines | percentage |
| Similarities | | | | |
| 1. respond + to + something/somebody | 120 | 60.00% | 121 | 60.50% |
| 2. respond + by + doing something | 7 | 3.50% | 6 | 3.00% |
| 3. respond + (to something/somebody) + with + something | 12 | 6.00% | 10 | 5.00% |
| 4. respond + that-clause | 1 | 0.50% | 2 | 1.00% |
| Differences | | | | |
| 5. respond + for + something | 1 | 0.50% | 0 | - |

| 8. respond | 57 | 28.50% | 52 | 26.00% |
| Total | 200 | 100.00% | 200 | 100.00% |

Examples of concordance lines in each pattern are shown as follows:

1. respond + to + something/somebody

BNC

LN 1: I think that they respond quicker to this visual display.

COCA

LN 1: Different species respond differently to grazing. Secondary effects of

2. respond + by + doing something

BNC

LN 124: # the prawns respond by crooking # helpless fingers, tiny segments #

COCA

LN 123: They typically respond by calling for legal intervention to improve

3. respond + (to something/somebody) + with + something

BNC

LN 128: in order to learn how to behave?. I would respond with some vigour

COCA

LN 128: musically untrained adults alike respond with these extramusical analogies

4. respond + that-clause

BNC

LN 140: to the mentally unfit patient, I would respond that there is no authority

COCA

LN 138: Chinese companies respond that their model is not the East German Stasi

5. respond + for + something

BNC

LN 141: then I'll be asking (----) to respond for the C E C. Motion three two three

6. respond + on + something

BNC

LN 142: between committees and had to respond on proposals for giving individual

COCA

LN 140: Subjects respond on an eight-point scale, ranging from "Not at all important

7. respond + speech / speech + respond

BNC

LN 143: and asks: 'Who is it?' And I respond : 'It is I, Brother Francis.' The porter

COCA

LN 143: me too, "she breaks in, and I respond," You're three? No, me too,

8. respond

BNC

LN 145: these cells respond vigorously, even though the stimulus may not look

COCA

LN 151: Instead of reacting impulsively to situations, they respond thoughtfully.

4.1.3.2 Collocations

The words in this study are synonymous verbs so their main collocates are nouns and adverbs. However, the present study focused only on noun collocates.

Table 2. The top ten noun collocates with respond from BNC and COCA

| Rank | BNC | | COCA | |
|------|-----------|-------------------|-----------|-------------------|
| | Word | Frequency (times) | Word | Frequency (times) |
| 1 | needs | 61 | questions | 437 |
| 2 | way | 50 | requests | 348 |
| 3 | changes | 47 | question | 284 |
| 4 | treatment | 40 | needs | 265 |
| 5 | requests | 23 | way | 255 |
| 6 | call | 22 | request | 183 |
| 7 | demand | 22 | kind | 155 |
| 8 | demands | 20 | changes | 135 |
| 9 | challenge | 18 | people | 130 |
| 10 | problems | 18 | comment | 121 |

The data shown in table 2 were drawn from BNC and COCA by searching noun collocates with respond followed by a noun within four words on the websites <http://corpus.byu.edu/bnc/> and <http://corpus.byu.edu/coca/>. The word ‘Mr.’, shown in COCA was not reported in this table because it cannot be considered a noun collocate with respond; it only occurred near respond and sometimes it appeared after the period. This is an example sentence from COCA corpus ... You should respond. Mr.Pines, go ahead...

4.1.3.3 Degree of Formality

The degree of formality of each word was considered based on its context. The word that occurred most in formal contexts was considered the most formal among the seven genres in BNC, namely spoken, fiction, magazines, newspapers, non-academic, academic, and miscellaneous, with academic being the most formal.

Respond occurred in the BNC is 3,442 times from 1991 to 1994. It occurred most in the academic and non-academic genres at 22% each followed by spoken and fiction genres at 9% each. This might imply that respond can be used in both formal and informal contexts in British English.

The COCA provides five genres namely spoken, fiction, magazines, newspapers, and academic, and the most formal context is also academic.

Respond occurred in COCA 26,656 times from 1990 to 2015. It occurred most in the academic genre at 29% followed by the spoken genre 26%. This might imply that respond can be used in both formal and informal contexts in American English.

4.2 REPLY

4.2.1 Definition from LDOCE

- a. (vi., vt.) to answer someone by saying or writing something
- b. (vi.) to react to an action by doing something else

4.2.2 Patterns form LDOCE

- a. reply + to + something/somebody e.g. Has Ian replied to your letter yet?
- b. reply + that-clause
e.g. Mills replied that he was staying at his parents' flat.
- c. reply + (to something) + with + something
e.g. The rebel troops replied to government threats with increased violence.

4.2.3 Corpus Data

4.2.3.1 Patterns from BNC and COCA

The two hundred concordance lines of the bare verb reply were drawn from BNC and COCA to compare and contrast with Longman dictionary.

Table 3. REPLY: The frequency of patterns in the dictionary and corpora

| Possible pattern | BNC | | COCA | |

7. reply + speech / speech + reply

BNC

LN 63: little pinpoint of light. 'Thank you,' I reply, in a voice so matter-of-fact that

COCA

LN 70: "Playing with the children," I reply from the window. Euler sighs, scratches

8. reply

BNC

LN 100: It will not be so easy to reply instantaneously, so why not number

COCA

LN 128: Some did not reply at all and others said that they did not play that sport

4.2.3.2 Collocations

The top ten noun collocates with reply are presented in table 4 below.

Table 4. The top ten noun collocates with reply from BNC and COCA

The data shown in table 4 were drawn from BNC and COCA by searching noun collocates with reply followed by a noun within four words on the websites <http://corpus.byu.edu/bnc/> and <http://corpus.byu.edu/coca/>. Some words cannot be considered noun collocates because they occurred after the period, comma, or question mark. For example, the word ‘father’ was ranked ninth in BNC; however, it is not shown in table 4 because it usually occurred after a comma and period. This is an example sentence from BNC corpus ...Jazz did not reply. His father went out,...

4.2.3.3 Degree of Formality

The word reply appeared in BNC 1,162 times from 1991 to 1994. The data from figure 4 shows that reply was mostly used in fiction at a frequency 41% while it occurred at only 8% in the academic genre. This might imply that British native speakers tend to use reply in informal contexts.

The word reply appeared in COCA 2,643 times from 1990 to 2015. The data from figure 5 shows that reply was mostly used in fiction at a frequency of 59% whereas it occurred at only 10% in the academic genre. This might imply that American native speakers tend to use reply in informal contexts.

4.3 ANSWER

4.3.1 Definition from LDOCE

The data shown in table 6 were drawn from BNC and COCA by searching noun collocates with answer followed by a noun within four words on the websites <http://corpus.byu.edu/bnc/> and <http://corpus.byu.edu/coca/>. Some words cannot be considered verb-noun collocation because answer can be used as verb or noun; thus, it sometimes appeared in noun-noun collocations. For example, the word 'guide' was ranked third in BNC; however, it is not shown in table 6 because it appeared as a noun-noun collocation. This is an example sentence from BNC corpus ...which accounting reports do they normally use? Answer guide: In general for external users,...

4.3.3.3 Degree of Formality

The word answer appeared in BNC 4,901 times from 1991 to 1994. The data from figure 6 shows that answer was mostly used in fiction at 30%, which is less formal than the academic genre where it occurred at only 12%. This might imply that the British native speakers tend to use answer in informal contexts.

The word answer was found in COCA 32,415 times from 1990 to 2015. The data from figure 7 shows that answer was mostly used in fiction at 31% and spoken at 28% while it occurred at only 15% in the academic genre. This might imply that American native speakers tend to use answer in informal contexts.

CHAPTER 5

CONCLUSION, DISCUSSION AND RECOMMENDATIONS

This chapter presents (1) summary of the study, (2) summary of the findings, (3) discussion about the similarities and differences of the three synonymous verbs, namely respond, reply, and answer (4) the conclusion, (5) limitations of the study, (6) recommendations for further research, and (7) pedagogical implications.

5.1 SUMMARY OF THE STUDY

This research studied the similarities and differences of three synonymous verbs between British English and American English in terms of grammatical patterns, collocations, and degree of formality.

5.1.1 Objective of the study

This study aimed to explore the similarities and differences among three synonyms, namely respond, reply, and answer, and compare and contrast between the two English dialects – British English and American English in terms of grammatical patterns. A comparison was also made with the Longman Dictionary of Contemporary English Online (2016) in order to see whether the patterns occurring in the dictionary occurred in real use. The top ten noun collocations in terms of frequency from BNC and COCA were investigated in order to observe the possible nouns occurring after three words as well as the degree of formality based on genre.

5.1.2 Test item and Data collection

Longman Dictionary of Contemporary English Online (2016) was used to collect the definition and grammatical patterns of the three synonymous verbs. The grammatical patterns from the dictionary were compared and contrasted with the patterns analyzed from the 200 concordance lines drawn from BNC and COCA. In terms of collocations, the data from BNC and COCA were used to compare and contrast the top ten noun collocations. The degree of formality was analyzed based on genre.

5.2 SUMMARY OF THE FINDINGS

The results of the study can be summarized as follows:

5.2.1 The three synonymous verbs tended to be used in different patterns

5.2.2 The three synonymous verbs tended to co-occur with different noun collocates.

5.2.3 The three synonymous verbs could be found in different genres.

5.2.4 The grammatical patterns of respond and answer tended to occur in the same way between British English and American English whereas reply was slightly different.

5.2.5 Some noun collocations that occurred in BNC could not be found in COCA and vice versa.

5.2.6 The degree of formality among the three verbs tended to be similar between British English and American English.

5.3 DISCUSSION

This section concerns similarities and differences of the three synonymous verbs between British English and American English in terms of grammatical patterns, collocations, and degree of formality. The results support the study of Figes (2013) and Punyasuth (2014) in that synonymous words cannot be used interchangeably in every context. They can occur in both similar and different patterns, collocations, and genres.

5.3.1 Grammatical Patterns

The grammatical patterns of the three verbs had six similar patterns and four different patterns. The results showed similarities between British English and American English with respect to respond and answer but slight differences with regard to reply.

Table 7. Shared and different patterns among three synonymous verbs

| Shared grammatical patterns | | |
|--|---|--|
| respond | reply | answer |

| (7) respond + (to sth/sb) + with + sth | (7) reply + (to sth/sb) + with + sth | (7) answer + (sth/sb) + with + sth |
| (8) respond + for + sth/sb | - | (8) answer + for + sth/sb |
| - | (9) reply + sth/sb | (9) answer + sth/sb |
| - | - | (10) answer + (sb) + back |

Table 7 shows that three synonymous verbs, namely respond, reply, and answer, can be used in the same six patterns. However, the frequency of occurrence and the meaning might differ. For example, pattern (1) respond/reply to something/somebody conveys the meaning about doing something as a reaction or saying or writing something as a reply; in contrast, answer to something/somebody means to give an explanation, especially about something that people have done wrong. Moreover, note in pattern (7) respond and reply can be used in the structure ‘respond/reply to something/somebody with something’ while answer can be used without to. For instance:

BNC

LN 76: it raises but simply respond to them with ‘alarm’.

LN 138: One way people might respond to finding themselves with more real money than they want would LN 39: The language helper gives the stimulus and you reply with the correct response.

COCA

LN 209: “It was not unusual for Barry Yost to answer a question with a question.

LN 212: your father will put two and two together for you and answer you with one word.

Table 8 indicates that respond, reply, and answer have slight differences with respect to grammatical patterns between British English and American English. The frequency of the occurrences of the three words in the patterns that are not shared between the two differed by one percentage point or less. This implies that there might not be a difference in real life English language between these two native speakers in terms of the possible patterns that can be used.

Table 9. The frequency of patterns among three words in BNC and COCA

Frequency (times)

| Possible patterns | BNC | | | COCA | | |

| total | 200 | 200 | 200 | 200 | 200 | 200 |

Table 9 shows the frequency of occurrence of each word in different patterns and different corpora. It can be noticed that there are slightly different results between the British English and American English use of these three words. The word respond most often occurred in “v. + to + sth/sb” pattern with the frequency 120 and 121 times in BNC and COCA, respectively, while answer was mostly used in the “v. + sth/sb” pattern with the frequency of 135 times in both BNC and COCA. Nevertheless, there were some slight differences with regard to reply. The word reply can be used in three patterns “v. + to + sth/sb”, “v. + speech / speech + v.”, and “intransitive form”. The most frequent occurrence in BNC was the “intransitive form” pattern whereas in COCA, reply appeared with almost the same frequency in the “intransitive form” and “v. + speech / speech + v.”. This phenomenon could be explained by considering the genre. The word reply was mostly used in fiction and the evidence from 200 concordance lines indicated that American writers tend to narrate a story in a conversational tone more often than British writers do.

5.3.2 Collocations

Table 10. Noun collocates of all synonyms from BNC and COCA

| Noun collocates | Respond | Reply | Answer |
|-------------------------|------------|------------|------------|
| 1. question / questions | BNC / COCA | BNC / COCA | BNC / COCA |
| 2. request / requests | BNC / COCA | COCA | No |
| 3. letter / letters | No | BNC / COCA | BNC / COCA |
| 4. way | BNC / COCA | COCA | No |
| 5. call / calls | BNC | No | BNC / COCA |
| 6. people | COCA | No | COCA |
| 7. problems | BNC | No | COCA |
| 8. kind | COCA | BNC | No |
| 9. needs | BNC / COCA | No | No |
| 10. changes | BNC / COCA | No | No |
| 11. treatment | BNC | No | No |
| 12. e-mail | No | COCA | No |
| 13. debate | No | BNC | No |
| 14. days | No | BNC | No |
| 15. phone | No | No | BNC / COCA |
| 16. door | No | No | BNC / COCA |
| 17. research | No | No | COCA |

The information from table 10 reveals that only the word ‘question/questions’ can be used with all verbs in both English dialects and also with a high ranking. The rest can be used with different words and different dialects. Therefore, many synonyms cannot be used interchangeably in every context. Collocation is also one of the criteria that used to distinguish synonyms. This is also supported the concept of loose synonyms. Moreover, the difference is also important as remembering which noun collocates can be used with each verb will help learners use them more correctly. No.9 to no.17 provide nouns that often co-occur only with respond, reply, and answer respectively.

5.3.3 Degree of Formality

With regard to the degree of formality of respond, reply, and answer, the results showed that respond was the most formal word because it was used most frequently in the academic genre in both BNC and COCA. However, the BNC indicated that respond also can be used in non-academic genres; COCA also showed that respond can be used in spoken contexts at a high percentage as well. Thus, it seems respond can be used in both formal and informal contexts. The word answer is less formal than respond because it mostly appeared in fiction and spoken genres and reply was considered the least formal when compared to its occurrence in an academic contexts with answer. The word answer occurred more frequently in the academic genre than reply. There were slightly different results with regard to the frequency of occurrence and percentage between BNC and COCA. However, the overall results were similar between British English and American English.

5.4 CONCLUSION

This study investigated the similarities and differences among three synonymous verbs, namely respond, reply, and answer in terms of grammatical patterns, collocations, and degree of formality compared and contrasted with the two corpora. The following conclusions can be drawn from the discussion above.

5.4.1 Although the three words share the basic meaning about doing something as a reaction to something, they cannot be used interchangeably in every context because they have the differences in grammatical patterns, collocations, and degree of formality.

5.4.2 There were no significant differences in the results between British English and American English in using these three verbs.

5.4.3 The study discovered that respond, reply, and answer are loose synonyms.

5.5 LIMITATIONS OF THE STUDY

5.5.1 The form of the words was limited to only the base form; therefore, the results might be different when investigating more possible verb forms such as –ed or –ing forms.

5.5.2 The number of concordance lines were limited to analyzing the grammatical patterns; therefore, more patterns may be discovered if expanding the number of concordance lines.

5.5.3 The data drawn from corpora were random; therefore, the results might be different for each data collection.

5.6 RECOMMENDATIONS FOR FURTHER RESEARCH

5.6.1 Further study should use other criteria to distinguish synonyms, such as fuzzy, propositional or attitude.

5.6.2 Other corpora should be studied in order to see the results in different English speaking areas.

5.6.3 More concordance lines should be studied in order to obtain more information.

5.6.4 More verb forms such as –ed or –ing forms should be studied in order to obtain more information.

5.7 PEDAGOGICAL IMPLICATIONS

The results showed that the English verbs in question are loose synonyms and there are many criteria to distinguish them. Teachers should point out the differences and the similarities. Moreover, they should not only teach grammar but also collocations, especially the fixed collocations of one word that cannot co-occur with other synonymous words such as answer the phone/door but not respond/reply the phone/door.
